Don't join them anon.

But their are 4 groups as laid out in the Three Musketeers.

The group that was new at the time it was written but became like leaders.

Rothschilds.

Then the Three.

Jesuits who really were the Bavarian Illuminati

Nobility, self explanatory

And the third which isn't as obvious, seems to businessmen, which if it really is a full conspiracy would be secret society businessmen. But it would take years to get to the top and only the wealthiest or smartest people would be allowed based on elitist college frats or some other means like Hollywood actor, singer or athlete.

But all of these things would either take years and years to get anywhere or are just flat out of reach.

And even someone did get in it wouldn't accomplish anything, they would destroy their spirit.

It's just not possible anon, and it's not worth it.

If there are evil men hiding claiming the light while hiding in the dark then give them light, shine a light on them, but you don't defeat the darkness by making things more dark.

He danced a mighty fiddling tune

And when the night turned into day

Off he ran without a word to say
